

Dear Kindergarten Parents,

We know some of you have a lot of questions about kindergarten staggered days. Our normal routine is this....

At the end of July, you usually receive a letter from the school telling you which two days of the first two weeks your child will attend. During the first two days, students will all meet together and all teachers will get to know all students. We will do some assessments and the students will be divided into classes.

At the end of the second staggered day, students and parents are introduced to their kindergarten teacher. Both of these two days have a noon pick-up time and buses do not run at that time.

Because of all the changes in our world, this may not be the procedure for this coming year, but we wanted to explain what typically happens so you will have a few questions answered. We will update you as we know more information.

Thank you for your understanding,
