Emma's life was an inspiring example of service and friendship. When applying for her clinical internship, she wrote, "the study of medicine and the desire to pursue a job in this field are both essential to society...society needs people who enjoy saving people's lives." Her goals for the future centered on caring for and improving the lives of those around her.

What makes you passionate about a career in health care? How do you intend for your study of _____ to improve the lives of others? What are your long-term career goals beyond post-secondary education? What relationships will be important to ensure your success in this field?
