Some closing of advice...

1. Continue taking an active role in your child's academic progress. However, make sure to manage their stress for "perfection". We want productive struggle in middle school. Everything is important (grades, attendance, TCAPS, Benchmarks, Aims web) however, no one thing is "essential".
2. Middle School is going to be different, our behavior expectations will be different. Our students have more freedom and responsibility, but that also equals the need for greater consequences. Please "walk with us" in the consequences early and it will help your student later on in their middle school career.

Some closing of advice...

3. Avoid/Delay getting your student a smartphone. It will make their MS life so much easier. If you do, then buy monitoring software. Also, no social media! Their brains are not ready!
4. Beware what you hear “in the community” or on social media. If something seems unbelievable then it probably is. Call or email us anytime.
